The globe depicts the paths of every total solar eclipse of the 21st century, from 2001 to 2100. There are 75 paths in all, 68 "totals" and another seven "hybrids," which can briefly appear total or annular depending on the observer's location along the path. Yep, 2017's coast-to-coast eclipse is there, as is the U.S.-friendly one in 2024.
